Stockholm, Auguſt 26.

THE Turkiſh Aga, who has reſided here ſome Time, had his Audience of Leave the 19th Inſtant of their Swediſh Majeſties. M. Lowen Gentleman of the Bedchamber to his Majeſty, and Secretary Soldan, went about Eleven in the Forenoon to the Aga's Lodgings with four of his Majeſty's Coaches, two of which were drawn by ſix Horſes, and the other two by two Horſes each, and conducted the Aga to Court in the following Manner. Firſt rode two of his Majeſty's Grooms, then followed the two Coaches with two Horſes, wherein ſat ſome of the Aga's Retinue, together with M. Savary the Interpreter; then were led two of his Majeſty's Horſes; afterwards rode the Aga's Marſhal, followed by one of the Coaches and ſix, wherein ſat the Aga himſelf; over-againſt him ſat the Gentleman of the Bedchamber Lowen, and Secretary Soldan; then followed the other Coach with ſix Horſes. On the Sides of the Aga's Coach went eight of his Majeſty's Footmen, together with the Aga's Servants, and two Pages ſtood behind the Coachman. Upon the Plain before the Palace ſtood a Battalion of the Royal Guards ranged on both Sides up to the Palace Gate. On the Bridge leading to the Kidderholm was placed a Guard to keep off the Populace. Thoſe in the two firſt Coaches alighted at the Palace Gate, but the Coach in which the Aga ſat drove up to the Stairs in the Palace-Yard, where the Officers of the Guard upon Duty ſaluted the Aga. At the Bottom of the Stairs in the Palace-Yard the Aga was received (in the Abſence of the Maſter of the Ceremonies) by the Gentleman of the Bedchamber and Introductor Cronſtrom; but above at the Entrance into the Palace he was met by Baron von Duben Marſhal of the Court, and other Gentlemen, who went before him into the firſt Hall, where thoſe Gentlemen ranging themſelves, the Aga and his Retinue paſſed between them into the Room of Audience, where his Majeſty ſat covered under a Canopy of State; their Excellencies the Senatours of the Kingdom ſtood on each Side near His Majeſty's Chair, and ſeveral General Officers, with other Perſons of Diſtinction, were likewiſe in the Room of Audience, as well as in the other Hall through which the Aga paſſed. When the Aga approach'd his Majeſty, he took his Leave by a ſhort Speech, which was interpreted by the Interpreter Savary. This Speech was anſwered in his Majeſty's Name by the Chancellor M. Von Kochen, which Anſwer was likewiſe interpreted to the Aga. Afterwards the Chancellor delivered his Majeſty's Letter to the Turkiſh Emperour, which the Aga received with great Reſpect, and return'd his Thanks in the Turkiſh Language, which was again interpreted. After the Audience of his Majeſty, the Aga was conducted to her Majeſty the Queen, of whom he had likewiſe a gracious Audience of Leave. He then departed, and at going out was invited by the Marſhal of the Court to partake of the Entertainment which the King had ordered to be prepared for him; and after Dinner he was preſented with Coffee, Perfumes, and Tobacco, and both before and after Dinner Water was given him to waſh himſelf with according to the Turkiſh Cuſtom. When the Entertainment was over, the Aga was conducted back to his Lodgings with the ſame Ceremony, and his Marſhal, who rode on Horſeback, carried his Majeſty's Letter to the Turkiſh Emperour before him, in the ſame Manner as he did a Year ago the ſaid Emperour's Letter to his Majeſty.
